Every Vote Really Counts. On January 4, people across Virginia watched an important state election get decided in a very unusual way. With news cameras rolling, an election official reached into a bowl, pulled out one of the two names inside, and announced the winner: David Yancey. The drawing was the culmination of a two-month battle in a neck-and-neck race between Republican incumbent Yancey and Democratic challenger Shelly Simonds for a seat in the Virginia House of Delegates.
